To whom it may concern

In my former capacity as director of training at Saatchi & Saatchi, and latterly as owner of The Burns Unit tlc, I have employed Simon as a trainer and consultant on many assignments.

These courses covered a variety of business objectives including workshops for creativity, team bonding, team collaboration and communication as well as negotiation strategies.

In all of these courses Simon employed specially adapted games and exercises which were key in achieving the course objectives. These techniques made all the difference because they are based on spontaneity and collaboration.

Simon always looks to tailor his courses to specific requirements and always adds huge value by adapting his library of skills and combines this with his years of experience working with so many blue chip clients to create unique and memorable learning experiences.

Simon's workshops empower and inspire delegates and the course feedback has always been very positive. I have no hesitation in recommending Simon as a course leader.
